SO 219 Human Development in the Social Environment II

Syllabus

Lecture Hours/Credits: 3/3

Catalog Description

Prerequisites SO 217

This course is the second in a sequence that explores individual and family dynamics from an ecological/systems and development framework focusing on human functioning from birth through adolescence and into geriatric stages of life. This course provides an understanding of the relationships among biological, psychological, sociological, spiritual and cultural development. Major consideration is given to building knowledge and a value base practice with individuals and families, descriptive and analytical reasoning and assessment skills. Because as social workers we view the person within his/her environment, the goals of this course are not only to focus on our life-span development; but to also explore the various systems, i.e. family, groups, community, culture and social institutions in which we live. The application of this content to diversity, populations-at risk and social and economic injustice is included.

Textbook and Course Materials

It is the responsibility of the student to confirm with the bookstore and/or their instructor the textbook, handbook, and any other materials required for their specific course and section.
